

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A probe card has first contact terminals electrically connected to the fine-pitch electrodes of a test target; wirings drawn from the first contact terminals; and second contact terminals electrically connected to the wirings, wherein the first contact terminals are formed each using an anisotropically etched hole in a crystalline substrate, and a semiconductor device test method (fabrication method) using the probe card.